PHOTOGRAPH AN UNEXPLORED LAND

Capt. Stevens Takes First Aerial Pictures of River in Brazil.

New York.—Capt. A. W. Stevens, aerial photographer of Dr. A. Hamilton Rice's expedition to hitherto unexplored regions in the tropical jungle north of the Amazon river basin in Brazil, announced recently that he and Walter Hinton, the aviator, according to the New York Times recently, had discovered the source of the Parima river in the Parima mountains last month, and had photographed and mapped almost 1,000 miles of terrain, including 120 miles never before explored by white men.

Flying at an altitude of one mile above the Rio Branco, the Rio Urucora and the Rio Parima, and using a special high-altitude camera that can make a photographic record of a strip of land 120 miles long and one and one-half miles wide, Captain Stevens said he had taken the first aerial pictures ever made of these rivers and the surrounding country, and had made the first complete and accurate map of the country all the way from the City of Manaus, the base of the expedition, to the source of the Parima river.

Accompanied by James W. Swanson, radio expert of the Rice expedition, Captain Stevens arrived in New York on the steamship Polycarp. Captain Stevens told of his experiences in the office of the Fairchild Aerial Camera corporation, which makes the special army air-service camera which Captain Stevens used.

Left the Expedition Behind. Captain Stevens said that he had left Hinton at Manaus and the rest of the expedition of 50 whites and natives, headed by Doctor Rice, several hundred miles farther from civilization on their way to the source of the Parima.

When the Rice expedition reaches the headwaters of the Parima, which it may have done by now, Captain Stevens went on, it may be confronted by the same tribe of cannibalistic Indians that attacked Doctor Rice and his party with poisoned arrows on the other side of the Parima mountains in 1920, and prevented the explorer's finding the source of the Orinoco river, which also rises in the Sierra Parima. It is hoped, however, that by this time the Indians, in the fashion of the Persian tribes in "Grass," may have made their annual pilgrimage across the mountains to the Orinoco side. Stevens and Hinton did not see the Indians at the source of the Parima, but did see clearings and other indications that one of their villages was near. In order to win their friendship for the other white men of the expedition, the aviators dropped red parachutes containing glass beads, pocket knives and other gifts.

Before his return to America Doctor Rice will complete his research at the source of the Parima into the ethnological and geological features of the hitherto unexplored region and its commercial possibilities. Captain Stevens said that the expedition already has learned many interesting facts about the customs of the friendly natives—full-blooded Indians who go about naked, eat raw food and are strict monogamists—and about fossilized skeletons discovered in the river basins.

Has Many Natural Resources. When Doctor Rice returns, according to Captain Stevens, he expects to bring with him valuable information as to the possibilities of further development of the Amazon-Parima region for the sake of its rubber, gutta percha and other natural resources.

"The expedition has already shown," Captain Stevens went on, "that a white man can stand the same exposure in the tropics as the Indians when proper medical precautions are taken. Charles Bull, a former Harvard athlete and a classmate of Doctor Rice, traveled alone, except for an Indian crew, in a canoe ahead of the main body of the expedition for 700 miles. Naked as the Indians himself, he got to be nearly the same color as they, but at last reports he was standing the exposure to the tropical sun and rain in fine shape.

"Almost all the members of the expedition had tropical fever. All recovered except Doctor Koch-Grunberg, the German explorer, who died. Hinton suffered from the ordinary type of malaria, which is chronic and which bothered him all the time he was flying.

"Great credit is due to Hinton for plotting our seaplane in and out of many difficult situations during the 174 hours we were in the air between Manaus and the headwaters of the Parima, especially in view of his recurrent attacks of fever. We had to fly at more than 5,000 feet because of the heat.

Used Plans for Scouting. "We used the plane as scout for the main expedition, sketching in the main streams and many tributaries, and for photography. The plane was of American make and stood nine months' constant exposure to tropical sun without shelter, and with the hull immersed in water a great part of the time.

"Built followed us to establish gasoline stations. After making and photographing a certain stretch of river we would fly back with the pictures, which would be developed in order to guide Doctor Rice over that part of his journey."

Captain Stevens said he thought the outstanding feature of the expedition was its success in wireless transmission from the jungle.

"Although working with portable apparatus and in the heart of the world's greatest forest," he said, "a record was made in exchanging the first wireless messages to pass directly from South America to England and back again. Long-wave communication was carried on between the expedition and Manaus and short-wave communication to many parts of the world, including New York, San Francisco, London, Rio Janeiro and New Zealand. The signals were reported as very strong, both in New York and London. Part of the apparatus was designed and assembled on the job by the operators, John W. Swanson and Thomas M. McCaleb.

"The antenna system was often erected by sawing down a number of large trees in the forest and stringing the wires between other tall trees on the edges of the roughly cleared space. A wire was usually strung from the folding table that held the instruments to a ground loop.

Curiosity Kills Cobra. "On one occasion at night in the forest McCaleb, while transmitting, was startled to see a small cobra of a very poisonous species come crawling up this wire, attracted by the hum of the converter perhaps or by a small electric light. He waited until the snake pushed its head on the table and severed its neck with his pocket knife. Needless to say, the message suffered a marked interruption! Snakes were often seen in making camp, but always moved away from men. A number of very large snakes were shot. It was almost unnecessary to take aim; the snake usually kept his head directly in front of the muzzle.

"The rivers were full of large fish, easily hooked or speared. A very common fish, the uariyia, though usually shot over a foot long, has teeth so sharp and jaws so powerful that it often severed three or four strands of copper wire with which each hook was attached to lines. Because of this fish swimming was not popular.

"The largest animal that furnished fresh meat was the danta or tapir, some of which were shot for food. Wild pigs, monkeys and smaller animals were fairly easy to get.

"The real owners of the Amazon basin," he continued, "are the ants—big, little, black, red, with stings and with wings. Weight or bulk considered, certain small stinging ants, though not dangerous, can produce more irritation than almost any other carrier of venom, while the bite of the larger ants is far more dreaded than that of the scorpion. Scorpions were plentiful, and many members of the expedition were stung by them but with little harmful effect. From getting several thousand assorted bites and stings and being frequently in warm river water one's blood suffers some change, so that it is necessary to watch stings, scratches or cuts carefully to prevent tropical ulcer. Almost all natives bear the marks of these ulcers."

A custom of the country, Captain Stevens said, was to tie the boys of fourteen to fifteen into a sack filled with stinging ants. Those who survived this test are recognized as having arrived at manhood's estate.

Captain Stevens said that the expedition lived largely on the native farina, or meal, and dried meats.

For Thanksgiving dinner Stevens and Hinton flew back down the Rio Branco to a settlement where they could get bacon and cheese, which had to substitute for turkey and cranberry sauce.

The Rice expedition left New York last March and went by steamer to Manaus, which is on the Rio Negro just north of its confluence with the Amazon. Two seaplanes which had been shipped from New York were assembled at Manaus in June.

The explorers followed the Negro to its confluence with the Branco, which they then followed until it ran into the Urucora. This they followed to its junction with the Parima, and this junction was as far as white men had previously gone. It was at the junction that Stevens and Hinton saw the last of the natives. For the 120 miles of unexplored land over which they next flew they saw no signs of life until they came to the clearings at the end.

Doctor Rice and his followers probably will have had some difficulty traveling over this 120-mile stretch, said Stevens, because of rapids and waterfalls. It will probably take the expedition weeks to cover the ground that he and Hinton flew over in a few hours, he added.

Captain Stevens said he and Hinton discovered the source of the Parima about 3 degrees north of the equator and 64 degrees west longitude, on March 9. This ended the aviators' work and they flew back to Manaus, where Hinton remained to take the planes apart and ship them back to New York.

Captain Stevens said that Doctor Rice will return to civilization early this summer unless he delays to investigate a recently discovered landslide, on another tributary of the Amazon, which has uncovered large fossilized skeletons.

Vandals Push Down Tombstones in Cemetery

Kasota, Minn.—Twenty-eight monuments in the Kasota cemetery were pushed down during the night. Many of the stones are broken in several parts, entailing losses aggregating several thousands of dollars. A Burlington expert has been dispatched by the Minneapolis police department to this city to take finger prints on the stones in an effort to trace the persons responsible for the destruction.

Expression of Derision

THE WHY, WHEN AND WHERE OF FASHIONS
The Lordly Pheasant.

The beautiful plumage of the Lady Amherst pheasant, and other less gorgeous species of the pheasant family, are in demand for trimmings, being used even to collar and cuff a coat, as well as sparingly applied to decorate a hat.

Formerly the bird was an emblem of royalty, pomp, and magnificence, especially the beautifully plumed specimens from China and India. The common or English pheasant was taken to Britain by the early Roman legions more than two thousand years ago. In Egypt, since about 235 B. C., these beautiful birds and their plumages were carried every year at a festival of Ptolemy Philadelphus at Alexandria, who was celebrated for his good behavior to a god.

One of the most interesting incidents connected with these birds and their plumage is found in the French history, and is known as the "love of pheasant." After the capture of Constantinople by the Turkish hordes in 1454, the entire Christian world, Philip the Good, Duke of Burgundy, gave a banquet at Lille of unheard of magnificence. At the end of the banquet he made a solemn oath, by placing his hands on pheasant feathers, that he would challenge the Sultan of Turkey to a personal mortal combat. Willing as he seemed to be, he was stopped in this endeavor by domestic political events which demanded his immediate attention.

"The Great Open Spaces"
Realism predominates in our literature; but the western story is still in the hands of the romantics. The writers of the old time of the great open spaces where a man's life was a constant struggle with the untamable forces of nature and the untamed passions of the men there. Realism, awake! There never will be any better places to live in the seat of the power than the great open spaces, than these vast open spaces.

Sentenced to Pen Without Hearing

Jesse Simmons, Arrested for Public Intoxication, Sent to Penitentiary at Albany Without Being Arraigned Before a Judge.

How justice can be dispensed improperly was brought to the attention of Supreme Court Justice G. D. B. Hasbrouck at special term held at the court house today when Judge W. D. Brimmer appeared in behalf of Jesse Simmons of Saugerties, who was sentenced to sixty days in the penitentiary at Albany by Police Judge Clyde F. Gardner of that village. District Attorney Traver stated that he would not oppose the application for the release of Simmons if it was true that Simmons had been sentenced without having been arraigned or given a chance to enter a plea of guilty or not guilty to the charge. The commitment papers stated that Simmons had entered a plea of guilty to the charge of public intoxication.

Judge Brimmer said he would prove that Simmons had not been arraigned before Justice Gardner and called upon Officer John Lavelle of the Saugerties police force who had made the arrest.

Officer Lavelle stated that he had received a call to the Simmons home and found Jesse on the verge of delirium tremens, had taken him to the lockup in the village and at the request of Simmons's brothers had gone after Justice Gardner.

Justice Gardner was informed of Simmons's condition and stated that he understood there was an alcoholic ward in the Albany penitentiary and with the consent of Jesse's brothers he would commit him to the penitentiary, which was done without Jesse being brought from his cell and taken before the justice for a hearing. Justice Hasbrouck granted the application and Simmons was released from custody.

Navy Appeals To The Country

No Time to Quit, Says Naval Officer in Charge of Shenandoah Disaster, in Deplored Criticism of Naval Policy.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Caldwell, Ohio, Sept. 5.—An appeal to the country to stand behind the navy department in the Shenandoah disaster was made here today by Captain George Washington Steele, upon his arrival to take charge of the investigation in the great air disaster, which claimed fourteen lives and destroyed the dirigible Thursday. Captain Steele is the commander of the naval air station at Lakehurst, N. J.

Steele arrived here at 8:55 a. m., accompanied by Commander Jacob H. Klein and a staff of naval officers. He left at once for Ava, where the major part of the wreckage of the airship lies.

"This is no time to quit," Captain Steele declared. "We must go through with this policy or the dead of the Shenandoah will have died in vain, but we must have the support of the public and the press."

Captain Steele expressed the opinion that the loss of the Shenandoah was unavoidable.

"The ship encountered stronger winds than she was built to stand," he said.

Steele deplored the attitude of criticism taken in the editorial columns of some newspapers.

"A Columbus newspaper yesterday," he said, "carried a column about what it calls 'those million dollar experiments of the navy at Ava.' This is deplorable and should be discontinued."

"The dispoiling of the Shenandoah by vandals was outrageous," Steele continued. He added that the department of justice may be asked to bring to justice the souvenir hunters who swarmed the wreck and carried off parts of the dirigible as mementos of the wreck.

Captain Steele said that he expected to end his investigation on the ground within the next day or so.

Society Notes

A Birthday Party.

A very enjoyable birthday party was held on September 3, when Mary Murphy, of 49 Tompkins street celebrated her eleventh birthday. Games and singing were enjoyed also piano selection by Katherine and Joseph Murphy. At four o'clock the children were ushered into the dining room which was prettily decorated and where dainty refreshments were served. A large birthday cake with eleven lighted candles adorned the table. The guests departed wishing Miss Mary many more happy birthdays. Among those present were Minnie and Bessie McHugh, Kathleen Slater, Kathleen Galvin, Vincent Masten, Joseph Murphy, Maud and Joseph Sparling, Eugene Havin, Harnett, Marion, Gladys, Ruth and Edward Bernard, Winifred Dermody, Dick, Jack and Marjorie Rice, Loretta Maskett, Katherine and Mary Murphy.

Johnson-Stoddard.

Miss Genevieve Marie Stoddard, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Scott Stoddard of 354 Third street, Colonial Terrace, Newburgh, and a granddaughter of George N. Stoddard of this city, was married in the rectory of St. Patrick's Church, Newburgh, on Friday afternoon, September 4, to Lieutenant Edwin Lynds Johnson of Milwaukee, Wisconsin. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Stephen P. Connolly. The bride was attended by Miss Marguerite H. Dotter of Cohoes, N. Y., who was her classmate at college. Lieutenant Gerald Gallaway of New York city, a recent graduate of West Point, was the best man. The affair was a very quiet one and was attended only by members of the immediate families. After a reception at the home of the bride, Lieutenant and Mrs. Johnson left for an extended motor trip. They will be at home the last of the month at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana, where Lieutenant Johnson is stationed for duty. Miss Stoddard was educated in the Newburgh schools and later attended Russell Sage College of Troy. Since graduation she has been secretary to the graduate manager of athletics at West Point. She has been a frequent visitor at the home of relatives here and has a number of friends in and about Kingston. Lieutenant Johnson attended the Milwaukee schools and Lawrence College of Appleton, Wisconsin, before entering the United States Military Academy from which he was graduated in June of this year. He was a popular member of his class as an "A" man in football, president of the Athletic Society and was interested in many other activities of the Academy.

Battery Charger Connection Hints

Should Be As Nearly Foolproof as Possible, From Working Standpoint.

A battery charger is one piece of apparatus necessary for every radio equipment that uses a storage battery. It should be the one article that is as nearly foolproof and perfect as possible—not foolproof from the viewpoint of preventing anyone from tampering or changing the mechanical parts, but foolproof from a working standpoint.

One never finds out the defects and faults that are attached to any piece of apparatus until after it has been in service for some time, unless the constructional features are pointed out beforehand.

Some magnetic and bulb types of chargers may be ruined or badly damaged if an attempt is made to charge the battery without first disconnecting the wires that run from the receiving set to the battery terminals. The reason for this is that one side of the power line is usually grounded and one of the filament leads of the set is connected directly to ground. If the wrong connection is made, then a short circuit is made through the charger.

Battery Connected to Set.

Other makes of these chargers can be successfully operated with the battery still connected to the set. Even when this is possible a wave of interference is sent out over the aerial that will ruin reception for all of the receivers in the near vicinity, even though the receiver attached to the charger is not in operation. This is possibly due to the fact that the charger forms a miniature transmitting station.

If the charger is left attached to the battery after it is turned off, then the battery is likely to discharge through the charger. The best arrangement is to detach the battery clips from the set when charging and to detach the charger clips from the battery terminals when the battery is fully charged.

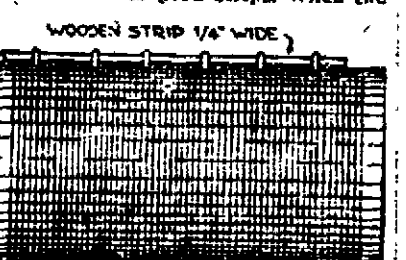

Attached Permanently.

The electrolytic type of charger can be attached permanently to the battery without any danger of discharging or interfering with surrounding receivers while the charger is in operation, or without harming the charger itself. With the bakelite type charger it is possible to use the set and charge the battery at the same time, an impossible feat with either the bulb or magnetic vibrator types of chargers, due to noise.

It sometimes happens that the power supply is cut off, due to breakdown in the generating apparatus or to changing over machines. If the current goes off for only an instant, and then comes back on again, it is likely to cause the vibrator to start up out of phase and cause current to flow through the battery in such a way as to discharge the battery. The electrolytic and bulb types will automatically start to charge with the correct polarity when the current comes on again.

Hint to Radio Fans on Winding Coil for Taps

In winding a coil for taps run on the number of turns to the first tap, then place a strip of thin wood one-fourth inch wide under the wire. Fruit-basket material makes good strips. When the place for the second tap is reached push the strip of wood through to catch the turn of wire, and so on until the coil is complete. A little binding placed on the wire over the wood and allowed to dry aids in removing the insulation for soldering the tap lead to the coil.—Radio Digest.

Makes Electric Light Wires Act as Antenna

Erecting an aerial is not always an easy matter. In crowded apartment houses where there are many aerials in dwellings, where the owner objects, or of buildings where the physical properties of the roof make an aerial installation a hazardous proposition, a good substitute for an outdoor antenna would be welcomed by many fans.

In experimenting with the bakelite B current supply set it was found in most cases that a good substitute for an aerial could be obtained by connecting the ground post of the current supply set to the ground post of the receiver. This antenna post of the receiver was connected to the regular ground on the water system.

There is a readjuster action between the ground post on the B current supply set and the lighting circuit. This makes the electric light wires act as an antenna system, which, with the regular ground connection, makes an efficient collector of energy for the receiver.

Tuning is practically the same as with a regular outdoor antenna, and the use of this system is within the reach of any fan who uses this type of plate voltage supply.

Fayette Smith of Passaic, Florida, has been spending the past week in town visiting his father and brother.

Smith Must Support Family.

David Smith of 19 St. James street was arrested on the charge of non-support of his wife and family.

At a hearing in city court this morning before Judge Harry E. Schirck he was compelled to contribute weekly toward the support of his family.

Not Even One Honest Man in French Village

Just as New England has its stories of wooden villages, so France has certain classics revealing the tendency of her countrymen to save pennies now and then at the expense of their fellows.

One of the best concerns a popular village priest. The villagers voted him great enthusiasm to give him a barrel of their best wine for his birthday. Each of the wine growers was to bring a bottle and empty it into the barrel.

On the appointed day peasant after peasant marched up to the barrel, emptied the priest, and plunging the nozzle of his green bottle through the bung hole poured its gurgling contents within.

When the last contribution had been made the chairman of the committee made an even longer speech of praise, and drew from the barrel to drink the health of the priest.

To the astonishment of everybody, the glass contained only clear water. Each farmer had assumed that the other would bring the wine.

Speed Contests That Are Not on Record

An exciting contest took place recently between a motorcyclist and an express train along the 300 miles between Sydney and Brisbane, Australia. The lone cyclist was reaching his destination 20 minutes before the train. A kangaroo raced a train in Australia, keeping alongside the locomotive for three miles, according to the Ritz.

Perhaps the most grotesque railway races have been on occasions when members of the crews have had to race their own trains, after having signalled the train to proceed and then being unable to board any of the cars. One man in England gave the "right away" signal and then found the train had started speed so quick that he was unable to board it.

It's strange was not discovered until the next station was reached.

After several minutes the guard was seen running after the train. He lost the race by 33 minutes. Another guard followed his train, but proved it was a fool's errand which he could not do.

Financial and Commercial

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
New York, Sept. 5.—The rally in prices of motor and industrial stocks was carried over into today's short session. The market made up in buoyancy what it lacked in activity.

Pierce Arrow's advance to a new high at 42 1/2 in the first period, while the preferred stocks advanced four points to a new high at 92 was easily the feature. Studebaker continued to move upward fractionally and a more active demand was seen for General Motors, White, Mack and other representative motor shares.

Westinghouse Airbrake made a further gain of 3 points in active trading and United States Steel was also active at a fractional higher price level. Can sold above 130 for the first time in the movement. A spurt in St. Paul Common carried the stock to around 9 1/2 and the Preferred to above 17. Katy, Wash and Rock Island were in good form and sold nearly a point higher. Oil stocks were inactive. Local traction stocks, including Brooklyn-Manhattan Elevated Guaranteed, sold higher, the former establishing a new high record for the year.

Pierce Arrow's advance to a new high at 43 1/2, up four points for the day was the feature of the closing period.

Atlantic Gulf and West Indies led a bearish movement in the shipping stocks and rose three points to a new high at 61 1/2; Radio Corporation was in demand at 57 up 2 1/2; and North American was above 59. Atlantic Coast Line sold 3 points higher at 188.

Good Games Here Over Week End

The Colonials desert their home grounds today and battle the West Harrison nine at White Plains. This will make the locals' second match with this down-river team. Eddie Phelan, who turned out a victory in the other game with the Plains outfit, will probably be sent against this club again today.

The D. and H. Generals will be at the Fair Grounds Sunday for a single match with the Colonials. Clyde Russell will probably be sent against this up-state outfit club tomorrow.

Clyde's last meeting with the Generals was a tough day for the railroaders for in that match the Albanian pitched a no-hit, no-run match.

On Labor Day the Jamaica Cardinals will play the Colonials in a double bill. There will be a morning and afternoon game. The Cardinals are one of the strongest teams in semi-pro circles and this holiday attraction should bring out a record crowd.

Finals Today In Amateur Golf

Crowd of Fifteen Thousand Expected to View Gunn-Jones Match Today—Jones a Five to One Favorite to Win Second Amateur Title.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Oakmont Country Club, Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 5.—It was to be master against pupil, patron against protegee and neighbor against neighbor today when Watts Gunn met Bobby Jones, his best friend and perhaps severest critic in the all-Atlanta final round for the National Amateur Golf Championship.

It was to be Jones, the arch-golfer and every inch a champion, against the young man he chaperoned to this tournament only to build up an opponent who might so far forget himself as to prevent Bobby from winning his second amateur title in as many years.

The odds against this were frankly about 5 to 1 however, when the Atlanta finalists made ready to step out for their thirty-six hole test this morning. Gunn was the reigning sensation of the early rounds but his game bogged right down on its competitive test yesterday, even though it was good enough to dispose of Dick Jones, the New York entry.

As a matter of fact, a comparison of semi-final cards showed that Bobby Jones had given down for the first twenty-seven holes they played as survivors in opposite sides of the semi-final bracket. If they put on the same act today the business will be quick and painless.

However, it was the impression that Jones had no wish to make a spectacle of his fellow townsman, even if he could guarantee to do so, which was a debatable point. They have not been making spectacles of Watts Gunn seven days in every week, as Vernon Bradford, Jess Sweetser and Dick Jones will freely attest.

In fact, if Jones was to win, it was possible that he would have to write par with a scalpel. The writer thinks Jones would prefer to have it so.

Jones had no push lined assignment yesterday in disposing of George Von Elm, the 1924 runner up for the title, yet he constantly inquired as to the progress of the Gunn-Dick Jones match.

It was difficult to picture Bobby as concerned about another man yesterday, for his serenity seemed far from what might have been. At one point, the gallery annoyed him by talking sotto voce while he was putting. This, of course, was a highly reprehensible proceeding, yet the placidity of the Jones of recent years has been such that worse transgressions than this, have left him unmoved.

He probably could look for something of the sort today, for the early prospect was for a crowd of 15,000 or more and there are not that many educated golf fans this side of the hereafter.

Indian Corn

In many parts of eastern Canada there is a brown bread that owes nothing to wheat, for it is made of corn meal, and, therefore, often called corn bread, and by corn, of course, is meant Indian corn or maize, the cereal that is a native of this continent, and which the Indians were growing when the white man came.

Hard wood, stove length. Edward T. McGill.

The Misses Lina and Sophie Schmidtkonz will resume teaching their class of piano pupils Monday, Sept. the 14th. Address, 211 Washington Ave. Phone 2045-M.

Series Game At The Fair Grounds

This afternoon the West Shore Railroad team must trim the Municipal Gas Company of Albany if they are to secure a grip on this series with their up-state rivals. Last Saturday afternoon the locals traveled to Albany and were defeated, but as the Capital City team is scheduled to play at the Fair Grounds today the West Shore nine is confident of victory.

The up-state club has a choice of Dillard and Fahy to do the twirling while the locals will use Bush or McAuliffe against their rivals. Both these twirlers are in excellent shape to lead the local champions as both have had a week's rest or more.

This second game of the series is expected to result in a fast match as the winning of this game means considerable to both clubs. The game, which will be staged at the Fair Grounds, will begin at 4 o'clock instead of 3 o'clock as is stated on the tickets which are being sold for this game. The charge at the gate or the producing of the tickets will entitle the fans to a seat in the grand stand, which means that those first to arrive will have the choice of their seats.

Two Games For Local All Stars

Sunday afternoon the local All Stars will oppose Millbrook at that town. The last time these clubs met several weeks ago, Millbrook pulled through with a 3-2 win after twelve innings. Hank Wicker, who did the twirling that game for Millbrook, will do mound duty against Cragan for the locals, who worked in the other game for the Kingston boys.

Monday the local club will try to take the deciding game of the series from Margaretville. The locals lost the first game to this club 7-4, and won the next 12-0. Freddie Stoudt will be on the slab for the All Stars, while Scanlon will do the twirling for the mountain boys. Bill Griffen, New York University catcher, will play his last game of the season with Margaretville in this contest.

League Trophy Now On Display

The Sunday School Athletic League baseball trophy which was won by the Church of the Comforter, is now on display in the windows of the sporting goods store on Fair Street.

This trophy, which is 22 inches high, was donated by the Draper & Maynard Athletic Supply Company through Charles Warren and was competed for by teams from the following local Sunday schools: Church of the Comforter, Elmendorf Presbyterian, Church of the Redeemer, Congregational, St. James' M. E., Clinton Avenue and Trinity.

The winners of the league, the Church of the Comforter, under the leadership of Manager Lowe, were given a run for first place by the fast Congregational team and by the Clinton Avenue team but managed to finish with a fair lead at the end of the season.

Mrs. Rieser to Broadcast.
On Friday afternoon, September 11, Mrs. William H. Rieser will broadcast from WEAF and may be heard by her many friends both in this city and elsewhere between the hours of 4 and 5 o'clock. Among other numbers Mrs. Rieser will delight her audience by singing "Delight of Springtime," an old melody of Civil War days, much sung in the South and which Mrs. Rieser sings with great pathos. "Dixie," and "When I Sing my Last Song. Let it Be Beautiful. Let it Be Day." The first and last selections are decidedly dramatic in character while the whole program will contain numbers to be enjoyed by all.

Not All Like Solitude
Those who like solitude are strong in its defense, but it never convinces the sociable.

JACK COOMBS LEFT EXCELLENT RECORD

Former Athletic Pitcher Has Made Mark in Big Leagues.

Jack Coombs, one time pitching mainstay for the Philadelphia Athletics, left organized baseball in 1916 but has remained identified with the game through his work as coach of the Williams college team.

"Silent Jack," as he was called for his refusal to argue on the ball field, was considered in his halcyon days to be as cool as Grever Alexander, as precise as Walter Johnson, and as brainy as Christy Mathewson. Coombs once beat Christy in a world's series game, another indication that Jack could pitch.

Coombs started pitching at Oelty college and went to the Athletics back in 1906. It was not until 1910, however, that he blossomed into greatness, and in that season and the succeeding was almost invincible. In 1910 Coombs struck out 234 batters in the 45 games he pitched. Coombs won 31, lost 9, and participated in 5 others that year.

In 1911 Coombs worked in two more games than he did in the previous campaign. He won 28, lost 12, and forced 184 batters to expire on strikes. The American league pennant in both of those years went to Philadelphia and also the title of world's champions went to the Athletics that year.

Coombs pitched and won three games in the world's series with the Cubs in 1910 and won the same number against the Giants the following season. In one of the games with New York, he gained the decision over Christy Mathewson. During the 1910 season, the now Williams coach pitched 13 shutouts and earned the name of "Iron Man" for pitching in 45 contests.

After the 1911 season, Coombs tried vaudeville with Chief Bender and their act went over big. They were assisted by two recruits from the vaudeville circuit, the Pearl sisters. Between the sisters and the ball players, the act was good enough to make the various audiences like it.

Stanley Coveleskie of the champion Washington team, at the age of thirty-four is the leading pitcher in the American league. A few months ago this veteran of the diamond was thrown on the market after nine years of faithful service with the Cleveland club. Apparently he was all through, when Stanley Harris, Washington manager, took a chance on him. He is one of the few remaining "spitball" pitchers in the major leagues, and his work is keeping the Nationals in the race.

Madison Square Garden to Seat 19,500 Persons

Tex Rickard gave assurance the other day that the new Madison Square garden will be completed by December of this year. Tex can now tell the whole world what his seating capacity will be.

When it is boxing night 10,000 persons will be able to find seats. When it is to be hockey 15,000 can attend in comfort. The str-day bicycle crowds can run up to 14,000. There will be just 14,500 permanent seats in the new structure, divided as follows: In the stadium proper, 6,710; small balcony, 1,800, and large balcony, 6,000.

The arena is to be supplied with 400,000 cubic feet of fresh air per minute and an equivalent amount of exhausted. Were every person in the new arena to sneeze, it would not hinder the view in any way. The expectation hall will have 55,000 square feet of space. There will be room for six tennis courts on the roof.

Many Hits and Buns
In a game played July 3, 1906, between St. Paul and Minneapolis clubs of the Western league, at St. Paul, the home team made 46 hits and 41 runs. Hits and runs were made in every inning and every batsman made four or more hits and two or more runs.

"Pebble Jack" Glimcock of the Boston made eight hits, seven runs to show them up. St. Paul made eleven doubles, also home runs, a total of seventy-nine buns, which stands as a record. The under-league record in total buns is 779-four. This team was the property of Charlie Combsing.

Tagging Major League Bases

Roger Hornsby's Cardinals put a few corrugations in the smooth path toward the pennant by breaking the Pirates' winning streak after it had reached nine straight. Hornsby's thirty-fifth homer helped the Cards to win, 9 to 3.

The Senators hit soundly and well while Ferguson held his former Red Sox playmates to 7 scattered snafus for a 9 to 3 victory. The Senators went a half game further into the lead thereby, all other American Leaguers being idle.

Bill Terry's home run in the tenth completely discouraged the Phils, 6 to 5, and placed the Giants a game closer to the Pirates. The gap is still plenty wide, being eight full games.

Bunched blows in the fourth and ninth gave the Reds a 2 to 1 victory over the Cubs. May and Bush were the duellists.
